Blast injures South African tourists near Egypt's Giza pyramids

A witness said he heard a "loud explosion" while sitting in traffic.

An explosion targeting a tourist bus injured at least 12 people on Sunday, mostly South African tourists, near a new museum being built close to the Giza pyramids in Egypt, two security sources said.

A third security source said the bus was carrying 25 South African tourists from the airport to the pyramids area, and that four Egyptians in a nearby car were also injured by broken glass.

Security and judicial sources said a rudimentary device containing nails and pieces of metal had been detonated remotely on the perimeter of the Grand Egyptian Museum, not far from the site of a roadside blast that hit another tourist bus in December.

Pictures posted on social media showed a bus with some of its windows blown out or shattered, and debris in the road next to a low wall with a hole in it.

One witness told Reuters he heard a "very loud explosion" while sitting in traffic.

South Africa's foreign ministry said staff from its embassy in Egypt were visiting hospitals to check on the reported injuries.

The museum is due to open next year as the new home for some of the country's top antiquities on a site adjoining the world-famous Giza pyramids. It is part of an effort to boost tourism, a key source of foreign revenue for Egypt.

The sector has been recovering after tourist numbers dropped in the wake of a 2011 uprising and the 2015 bombing of a Russian passenger jet.

There was no damage to the museum from the blast, which happened 50 meters from its outer fence and more than 400 meters from the museum building, the Antiquities Ministry said in a statement.

There was no immediate claim of responsibility.

Egyptian security forces are waging a counter insurgency campaign against Islamist militants, some with links to Islamic State, that is focused in the north of the Sinai Peninsula.

Attacks outside Sinai have become relatively rare, though there have been several security incidents in recent months in Giza, across the Nile from central Cairo.

In December, three Vietnamese tourists and an Egyptian guide were killed and at least 10 others injured when a roadside bomb hit their tour bus less than 2.5 miles from the Giza pyramids. REUTERS

Rocket fired in Iraqi capital, no casualties

2 A rocket was fired in Iraqi capital Baghdad's heavily-fortified Green Zone, which houses government buildings and foreign embassies, but caused no casualties, the Iraqi military said on Sunday. A blast was heard in central Baghdad on Sunday night, Reuters witnesses said, and two Baghdad-based diplomatic sources also said they heard the blast. "A Katyusha rocket fell in the middle of the Green

Zone without causing any losses, details to come later," the military said in a brief statement. The Katyusha multiple rocket launcher is an inexpensive type of rocket artillery that can deliver explosives to a target quicker than conventional artillery, but is less accurate. Police special forces found a rocket launcher in al-Sina'a district in eastern Baghdad and have sealed off the area, a police source told Reuters. REUTERS

Graduation speaker pledges to pay off students' debt

3 Billionaire investor Robert Smith surprised graduating students at Morehouse College in Atlanta, Georgia, by using his speech at Sunday's commencement ceremony to pledge to pay off the student loan debt of the entire class of 2019. Video footage of Smith's remarks show mouths falling agape before students rise to their feet to cheer and applaud as the pledge is made. "This is my class, 2019, and my family is making a grant to eliminate their student loans," Smith said during his speech, pointing toward hundreds of students dressed in black robes and mortarboards. "I know my class will make sure they pay this forward," Smith added. The black founder and chief executive of the private equity firm Vista Equity Partners has a net worth of about $4.4 billion, according to a 2018 estimate by Forbes magazine. REUTERS

Bank flagged Trump transactions for watchdog: NYT

4 Anti-money laundering specialists at Deutsche Bank AG recommended in 2016 and 2017 that multiple transactions involving entities controlled by President Donald Trump and his son-in-law, Jared Kushner, be reported to a federal financial-crimes watchdog, the New York Times reported on Sunday. The newspaper, citing five current and former Deutsche Bank employees, said executives at the German-based bank, which has lent billions of dollars to the Trump and Kushner companies, rejected their employees' advice. The reports were never filed with the government. The Times said the transactions, some of which involved Trump's now-defunct foundation, set off alerts in a computer system designed to detect illicit activity, according to the former bank employees. REUTERS

Trump blasts Republican lawmaker Amash over impeachment remarks

"Lightweight" and "loser" were some of the president's responses to Rep. Justin Amash.

Donald Trump lashed out on Sunday at the first Republican congressman to call the president's behavior impeachable, while Democrats warned Trump's stonewalling of congressional probes is strengthening the case for an impeachment inquiry.

Trump called Republican Rep. Justin Amash "a total lightweight" and "a loser" on Twitter, a day after the Michigan conservative said the Mueller report showed that the Republican president "engaged in specific actions and a pattern of behavior that meet the threshold for impeachment."

Amash's criticism made calls in the U.S. Congress for Trump's impeachment bipartisan, though just barely, with most Republicans still standing by the president at a time of economic growth, turbulent markets and global trade tensions.

Saying most lawmakers have not read it, Amash cited Special Counsel Robert Mueller's 448-page report on Russian meddling in Trump's favor in the 2016 U.S. election. On Twitter on Saturday, Amash said the report showed Trump had obstructed justice and added, "President Trump has engaged in impeachable conduct."

A frequent Trump critic, Amash is a part of the House Freedom Caucus, a conservative faction. He has also signaled he would consider running as a libertarian against Trump in 2020.

Counter-punching in his usual style, Trump tweeted: "Never a fan of @justinamash, a total lightweight who opposes me and some of our great Republican ideas and policies just for the sake of getting his name out there through controversy ... Justin is a loser who sadly plays right into our opponents hands!"

Trump will have a chance to make his case to supporters on Monday at a rally planned for Montoursville, Pennsylvania.

Amash's comments echoed the conclusions of many Democrats. House of Representatives Speaker Nancy Pelosi has said that Trump was moving closer to impeachment with his stonewalling of numerous congressional investigations of him and his presidency.

Still, Democrats are divided about impeachment. With 2020 election campaigns heating up, Pelosi said impeachment proceedings would be "divisive" for the country.

IMPEACHMENT PROCESS

No U.S. president has ever been removed from office as a direct result of the U.S. Constitution's impeachment process. The House of Representatives has impeached two presidents. Both were acquitted by the Senate.

The Mueller report, now at the center of an escalating oversight battle between Trump and House Democrats, detailed extensive contacts between Trump's 2016 campaign and Russia, but did not find that there was a conspiracy with Moscow. The report also described actions Trump took to try to impede Mueller's investigation, but made no formal finding on the question of obstruction, leaving the matter to Congress.

Amash also said on Twitter that Attorney General William Barr, a Trump appointee, "deliberately misrepresented" Mueller's report when he oversaw the roll-out of a redacted version.

There were no signs on Sunday of other Republicans following Amash's lead. Another Trump critic, Republican Sen. Mitt Romney, said on Sunday that Amash made "a courageous statement," yet also told CNN's "State of the Union" program that he did not believe Mueller's findings supported impeachment. REUTERS

Are you going places? Or looking for places to go?

Managing your benign prostatic hyperplasia (BPH) alone may not be enough. If you are on BPH therapy and visiting the bathroom frequently, you may have an overactive bladder (OAB).

The immediate need to 'go' interrupts your day and night – and it may not be caused by your BPH.

- Do you have to use the bathroom at least 8 times a day?
- Do you still wake up 2 or more times each night to use the bathroom?
- Do you experience a need to use the bathroom immediately (urinary urgency)?

If these symptoms disrupt your day and night, you may also have a condition called OAB.

A clinical research study is testing the safety and effectiveness of an investigational drug in men on BPH therapy experiencing OAB symptoms. Over 1000 participants in over 135 study centers across North America and Europe are expected to take part in the COURAGE Study

Finding meaning in suffering

Jack O'Connell discusses "Trial by Fire," which follows the tragic story of Cameron Todd Willingham. MOLLY GIVEN

In the early morning hours of December 23, 1991, in the small town of Corsicana, Texas, a deadly fire erupted in the home of Cameron Todd Willingham and his family. The blaze killed Willingham's three young daughters, Amber, Karmon and Kameron while Willingham's wife Stacy was at work, and Todd was the sole survivor of this heartbreaking tragedy. Willingham was soon after arrested and put on death row for arson and the murder of his three daughters, but the young father swore of his innocence even after he was locked up.

"Trial by Fire" examines the case of Cameron Todd Willingham (played by Jack O'Connell), his conviction and his relationship with playwright Elizabeth Gilbert (Laura Dern) after the proclaimed "bleeding heart" begins a pen pal relationship with Willingham while he's on death row. The question begins to arise in Gilbert's mind if Todd was wrongfully convicted, and she sets out to get more answers on the case that quite possibly put an innocent man behind bars, and a pending needle in his arm.

O'Connell sat down with Metro to talk more about the film, how he prepared for his role, and discuss why this case may be proof that there is a disturbing lack of justice in our country's justice system.

"Trial by Fire" is not meant to brighten anyone's day with false hope or even be a shot at political views—it's a raw and compelling story showing the extremely disturbing situation one man was put through, and on the other end of the spectrum also highlight the tenacity of the human spirit.

O'Connell, a UK native, had not heard out who he is, what his interests are, what's important to him, and I tried to figure out his surroundings at the time.

"I wanted to get to know who Corsicana is [as a town] and get to know Texas—not just the political backdrop, but the climate. All of these different factors gave me some training and helped me feel like I wasn't just doing an impression."

"Trial by Fire" has its low points, your heart breaks and you feel the desperation of Willingham's situation. "He was stripped of a lot of his freedom, on death row he's pretty much in solitude," says O'Connell. However, the movie also shows the strength and perseverance Willingham had, as he says in the film, you have to "find meaning in the suffering."

"His life was dependant on him trying to educate himself in some way. The system is set up for and fails people like Todd, you need money in that game. It's quite disadvantageous for him," says O'Connell.

"I just think across-the-board that justice is a hard thing to maintain, it takes a full investigation, it caught me lost. I feel like Todd was found guilty based on a system that was pretty dated even at that time."

Laura Dern as Elizabeth Gilbert in "Trial by Fire."

of the case prior to taking the role, but the actor was compelled by Willingham's story and truly tried to get an inside look at his life. "I had no prior knowledge, so reading the script was my introduction to Cameron's story, then it was just a case of doing research," says O'Connell. "[I tried to] figure out what my perspective on him is, and just tried to figure

Jack O'Connell in "Trial by Fire." ALL PHOTOS STEVE DIEL/ROADSIDE ATTRACTIONS

My view is not one that kind of points the finger at anyone really, I think justice, on the whole, should take time, especially when people's lives depend on it."

But if the finger isn't being pointed at one specific person, is it pointed at the downfall of a society as a whole? "It looks like it's pointing towards a bureaucracy that would rather execute an innocent man than admit to its faults. I think there's a hint of that in Todd's case, that's my personal view, that's criminal," O'Connell adds.

Hope came in many forms throughout the film for Todd, sometimes it was more beneficial, sometimes it was hurtful. But the purest form of hope came from Elizabeth Gilbert, who quite literally became one of Todd's only allies. "He maintained his innocence throughout more or less, so to have somebody who was impartial to his case and have someone to talk to and even offer a form of escape—talking to her even for short stints of time, it offered the escape. The more time Elizabeth spent on Todd's case and investigating herself, the more she was convinced that he was innocent as well."

"Trial by Fire" is a film that certainly has a lesson, but the dire situations of the story make this lesson's message a lot more cutting than most. Watching the film may not give you the warm fuzzies, but it certainly will inspire many. Whether it be to take another look at the subject of capital punishment, to remember a man who was disregarded by so many, to delve into a wildly compelling story or simply even to be inspired by incredible acting— "Trial by Fire" is a showcase of despair, hope, tenacity and morals.

"People have their views, and I don't necessarily consider it my job to change people's opinions on one thing or another. What excites me is telling stories, if they're made up, fine, if they're based on true events, great. I mean I think at the heart of this story is Elizabeth Gilbert and her work with the justice program. So certainly within this movie yeah, injustice does exist. But I'm not about to get on my soapbox and dictate it one way or the other," says O'Connell. "If I in any way offered Todd's voice and Todd's case and Todd's innocence a platform, that's an honor. That's something that I hold quite dearly, and I'm very fortunate to be able to do that."

"Trial by Fire" is now in theaters nationwide.

The Bruins celebrate clinching the Eastern Conference title last week.

GETTY IMAGES

BOSTON SPORTS TRIPLE CROWN WOULD CEMENT US AS TITLE TOWN

The Red Sox are the reigning World Series champions. The Patriots are fewer than four months removed from confetti landing on their helmets. The Bruins are four wins away from winning their second Stanley Cup this decade, and yet the most discussed topic in the city is, "What in the blue hell went wrong with the Celtics this season and how in the world does Danny Ainge fix it?"

There's a good reason for this, of course. No, basketball is not the favorite sport in Boston. It's just that the Celtics messed up this whole Boston sports pursuit-of-perfection thing royally.

The Boston Slam (winning the four major sports titles in consecutive order) is no longer possible thanks to the apathetic play of Team Green.

Poor us.

Where did it all go wrong?

Seriously speaking, though, Boston can still make history in the next few weeks.

If the Bruins do pull this thing off against either the Sharks or Blues in the Stanley Cup Final, Boston will become the first city in the history of the United States to win a pro sports trifecta in consecutive order since Detroit was a champion in the MLB, NFL and NHL 83 years ago (1935-36).

That will be the list. Detroit and Boston. No one else.

Of course, what's happening these days here in the Hub is much more impressive than what happened in the Motor City back during the Franklin Roosevelt administration (wonder if ol' Frank served up Chick-Fil-A to the Tigers during their White House visit?).

Back in the '30s, there were only eight teams in the NHL, only nine teams in the NFL (those Boston Redskins stunk up the joint, huh?) and only 16 teams in Major League Baseball. Obviously there was a much easier path to a title back then, considering each of today's pro leagues all have 30 teams or more.

What's taken so long?

Not to dabble in braggadocio, but it's actually surprising it has taken Boston this long to be this close to accomplishing the consecutive title trio. The Red Sox, Patriots, Bruins and Celtics have all had several multi-season stretches in the past 19 years in which they've firmly been in the championship mix.

The best shot at this next-level glory came back in 2007-08, when the Josh Beckett-Jonathan Papelbon-era Red Sox won the World Series in October. At that time, the Patriots were in the midst of an undefeated regular season — with another Lombardi Trophy almost being an afterthought — and the Celtics were just opening up their first season with Kevin Garnett and Ray Allen on board.

Oddly enough, it was the Patriots who interrupted the string of Boston excellence here, as they lost that infamous David Tyree game to the Giants.

Things were also promising back in 2013-14, when the Red Sox unfathomably won the World Series with dudes like John Lackey and Mike Napoli playing key roles. The Patriots were thought to be sure-fire title contenders at the time, and the Bruins had just come off a run that got them to Game 6 of the 2013 Stanley Cup Final (a loss to the Blackhawks).

But that Boston sports run quickly fizzled out when a banged-up Patriots team fell to the Broncos in the AFC title game. The Pats would win the Super Bowl over the Seahawks a year later, but by that point the Sox were again cellar dwellers, the Celtics were in a post-Pierce and -Garnett rebuild, and the Bruins were just entering a brief period of mediocrity.

Here we are just a few years later, however, with the stars seemingly aligned. The Bruins will have home-ice advantage against either the Sharks or Blues starting next week, and they have the best goaltender on the planet at this particular moment in Tuukka Rask.

A Boston sports Triple Crown has never been this close.

Tom Brady.

'Openers' in MLB driving bettors crazy

VSIN

Game day pitching changes in Major League Baseball are becoming a huge problem for betting markets. And it's only going to get worse this season.

More and more managers are using "openers" from the bullpen to pitch the first inning or two. They don't have to decide a day in advance which guy they're going to use. In fact, there's a tactical advantage in not letting your opponents know who's going to start.

Also, in any double-header caused by an earlier rainout, managers can be coy about which hurler will start the opener, and which will start the nightcap.

All this is a headache for oddsmakers and bettors. Typically, most bettors prefer to "list" the starting pitchers in a scheduled game. That way, if there's a late scratch because of an injury, the bet is also scratched and the bettor gets a refund. There's nothing worse than putting your money down on an ace, only to find out he discovered a blister in the bullpen and some mediocre long reliever is getting the nod instead.

Although, there's also an option to just bet "action," which means that any pitching change gets re-priced...but your bet still stands. You're still rooting for the same team (or Over/Under) after a pricing adjustment for the new pitcher. Most sharps refuse to bet this way (and many are adamant because they don't want oddsmakers to have that much control over their money). But there are situations where betting "action" might make sense:

"You're riding a hot offense, and you don't really care who the opposing pitcher is.

"You're looking to fade a team at a dead spot in their starting rotation, and you don't care which mediocrity is finally chosen to start.

"You're betting a trend or an angle that doesn't have anything to do with pitching (this isn't something many sharps would do, but many recreational bettors would).

"You're just betting a small amount for fun, and pricing adjustments aren't going to affect your enjoyment.

Sportsbooks and sharps preferred when all teams were on set starting pitcher rotations, and announced their "probable pitchers" well in advance. Now, there's additional paperwork, and unwanted frenzies when last-second "surprises" are unveiled.

Things are trending

Ryne Stanek has been one of the Tampa Bay Rays' top openers.

GETTY IMAGES

badly for oddsmakers and bettors. Teams are having success with "openers" in the first inning. Success gets copied. Baseball managers have no obligation to make life easy for the sports betting industry. They're trying to win games.

Managers on the best teams are trying to win a championship.

For bettors, the best advice is as follows:

"If you're making a bet specifically because of the starting pitchers involved, you obviously should list those pitchers.

Then, remember to go collect your refund if there's a change.

"If you're focused more on the teams, or a special angle that has nothing to do with the starting pitchers, you can just bet "action." Your bet will be live at prices that are adjusted to reflect the new starting pitchers.

- Aries Expand your interests and improve your skills and qualifications. How you handle others will affect the way you are treated. Listen carefully and avoid getting into an argument.
- Taurus Observe how an expert handles a tough situation to find your footing when dealing with matters that perplex you. A physical or personal change is favored.
- Gemini Know what is and isn't possible. Don't allow anyone to take advantage of you. Any partnership you develop has to be equal if you want it to work.
- Cancer If you lend a helping hand, it will prompt you to make a personal change that will pay off. An offer or settlement will improve your financial situation.
- Leo Keep your distance from anyone trying to take advantage of you. Your generosity should be limited to those who give as much as they receive. You can't buy love.
- Virgo A personal change will do you good. A chance to network or present what you have to offer will lead to advancement. An independent demeanor will attract interest. Walk away from excessive behavior.

- Libra Look at what you can accomplish, not at what's impossible. Know your market and concentrate on developing your skills and making new connections. Avoid discord and disruptive situations.
- Scorpio Consider how to best move forward. A change will give you a new perspective on how to use your skills most effectively. Positive advice will be offered. Romance is highlighted.
- Sagittarius Look at the big picture and go directly to the source if you find a discrepancy. Don't trust someone who is trying to twist things around or pressure you. Stifle indulgent behavior.
- Capricorn Don't let someone from your past back into your life. A change you make at home will bring you closer to a loved one. Use your intelligence and discipline to keep the peace.
- Aquarius Consider what you can accomplish and concentrate on reaching your goal. Refuse to let anyone interfere in your life or stall your progress. Avoid people who are pushy or selfish.
- Pisces Learn through observation and by helping those less fortunate. A domestic or lifestyle change will encourage you to improve your spending habits.
